

Femtosecond laser assisted cataract surgery has been one of the most exciting topics in ophthalmology for the past several years. By optimizing the critical steps of cataract surgery to create accurate, reproducible, and customized corneal and lenticular incisions, these lasers add an element of precision to cataract surgery that is unattainable with a traditional manual technique.

PART I

PART II